For local restaurants

Town passes grease-trap law

By BILL SHERROD

Restaurants in the town of Appomattox will have to install grease traps to protect the town's sewer lines, according to action taken by the Appomattox Mayor and Council at their meeting Monday night.

The Council voted unanimously to require restaurants to install the traps, which can be placed beneath the kitchen sink in a restaurant, within six months. New restaurants will have to have traps installed when they are built, according to the motion.

The motion also stipulated that the traps installed must be approved by the Health Department.

The grease trap-ordinance issue was discussed last year when it became apparent that grease from restaurants was collecting in the town's sewer lines and, in some places, fouling the pipes.

Clarence Stine, head of the county's Health Department, noted at a recent Council meeting that certain types of grease traps can be very expensive for merchants, necessitating removal of existing concrete or asphalt to accomodate underground installation.

Town Manager Bill Britton noted Monday night, however, that there are grease traps on the market which are much less expensive to purchase and install, and which would present no financial burden to the restaurateurs in the town.

Councilman also voted to turn control of the town ball park over to F.D. "Bookie" Johnson during the coming year.

Johnson was nominated for the job by Councilman Sam Carter. He will be in charge of scheduling use of the recreational facility, as well as maintenance and improvements planning.

In a related matter, Julie Coffman of the town's recreation committee told Council members that committee has endorsed improvement of the town ball park as the priority item on its list of objectives to improve recreation in Appomattox.

Other objectives listed by the recreation committee included installation of lights at the high school and middle school ball fields; adding lights to the high school tennis courts, resurfacing the courts and adding two new courts at the high school; resurfacing the high school track and adding lights; lighting the basketball court at the primary school and making the court regulation size; starting a soccer program at the elementary school; scheduling use of the swimming pool and tennis courts at Holiday Lake 4-H camp for all ages (recreational swimming and swim team competition); instituting a county-wide hunter safety program; coordinating target range and adding skeet shooting ranges; and coordinating programs for the elderly and finding meeting spots for existing programs.

In other actions, the Council:

- Denied a request for a street light at the corner of Countryside Drive and Route 460, near Dr. Larry Smith's office building.
- Accepted the low bid from Moses Motor Company for a new town pick-up truck, including trade-in of the truck currently being used.
- Granted a month-to-month lease for space in the Main Street railroad depot to the Historic Appomattox Station Arts and Crafts Center.
- Authorized an audit of the town's financial records for 1982 by the Auditor of Public Accounts.
- Authorized Town Manager Bill Britton to pursue a $35,000 grant to help pay the town's portion of the planned sewer-improvement project.

Route 460 Accident

A CONCORD MAN ESCAPED SERIOUS injury Tuesday when the pickup truck he was driving was struck in the rear by an empty tanker truck on Route 460 a half mile west of Police Tower Road in Appomattox County. According to State Trooper Keith Webber, Wilton M. Routon, Sr., of Rt. 2, Concord, was traveling east on Route 460, and slowed to make a right-hand turn into a farm entrance when his truck was struck in the rear by the tractor-trailer, driven by Roy Leon Ferguson of Rather Glen, Va. Both vehicles sustained heavy damage, according to Webber, but neither driver was seriously hurt, although Routon was transported by the Appomattox Volunteer Rescue Squad to a local doctor's office where he was treated for minor cuts and abrasions and released. Ferguson was charged by police with reckless driving in the accident, which occured late Tuesday morning. Damage to the vehicle Routon was driving can be seen above, while the tanker truck can be seen in the Route 460 median strip in the background. (Photo by Bill Sherrod)

First baby is born

Teresa Ann Johnson of Route 3, Appomattox, is the proud mother of a son, the first baby born to an Appomattox County resident in 1983.

Jonathan Fontinne was born at 11:15 p.m. on January 4 in the Virginia Baptist Hospital. He weighed eight pounds and six ounces and was 21 and one half inches in length.

Grandparents are Mrs. Sadie L. Pankey and Leslie A. Pankey and Tom Johnson is great-grandfather.

As winner of the First Baby Of The Year contest, Jonathan and his mother will receive a wide variety of prizes and services offered by a host of Appomattox businesses as part of the contest sponsored by the Times-Virginian newspaper.

Lions Club to meet

The Appomattox Lions Club will meet Thursday evening at the Country Fare Restaurant (behind Food World food store) at 6:45.

Eric P. Bartle, district governor, 24-B, from Richmond will make his official visit to the Appomattox club.

All Lions members are urged to attend this meeting.

Appomattox reassessment is underway

Appomattox County is taking a long, hard look at the taxable values for this area.

Reassessment began in October of 1982 and will continue until the end of 1983, with the reassessment figures becoming effective January 1, 1984. The reassessment figures will be reflected in the tax tickets mailed in the fall of 1984.

Fred Pearson

"State law calls for reassessment every four years," said Fred Pearson of Pearson Appraisal Services, Inc. of Richmond, the firm handling the job of reassessment for this county.

"However, in counties with less than 40,000 population, the county may opt to extend the time one or two years," Pearson continued.

Tax values for any county must be reassessed every six years. The last reassessment for this county was in 1978.

Reassessment is needed to equalize the amount of taxes property owners pay and to insure that each property owner pays his fair share. No more and no less.

Four companies submitted cost figures on the job reassessment for Appomattox County and Pearson Appraisal Services Inc. of Richmond submitted the low figure. The local board of supervisors made the final decision as to who would handle the job.

The Board of Supervisors appropriates the money for reassessment and in turn they keep a watchful eye on the work as it progresses.

In addition to the company of professionals who handle the reassessment, the county has a Board of Assessors. The Board of Supervisors makes recommendation to the Circuit Court judge as to the individuals who will make up this Board of Assessors. The court in turn appoints the members of the Board of Assessors.

"We, (the firm of appraisers) come into a county and review the real estate sales," said Pearson. "We evaluate real estate sales in the county, using the average of sales, not highest or lowest. We actually break the figures down into schedules; a schedule for buildings, another for homes, (and homes are broken down by type), commercial buildings, etc." he added.

"We take into consideration the initial cost of the home or commercial building and then we consider improvements made on the property and also the amount of depreciation," Pearson continued.

"When it comes to land, we do likewise, breaking it down into categories," said Pearson. "We consider location, distance from town, potential for commercial use, size of tract, topography (lay of the land), usable road frontage, timber value and other considerations."

The reassessment firm carefully checks every tract of real estate, every home and commercial building in the county.

"We try to meet and talk with as many property owners as possible," said Pearson. "We do not go into a home unless requested by the home-owner," he said.

"When we go to a home, we leave an Owner Identification Card," he added.

Every property owner will receive new assessment figures. There will be public hearings on the new assessments scheduled in the event any property owner has questions.

"Property owners can check and see if they received fair treatment in the reassessment. They may make an appointment to talk with the Board of Assessors if they have questions. The board will take into consideration any questions property owners have and if they determine the assessment is in excess of market value, or that it is not appraised in line with comparable property, they may make adjustments accordingly," commented Pearson.

The purpose of property reassessment is not to increase property taxes, but to insure that there are uniform assessments.

Dump talk set Friday

The state's study on locating a low-level radiation disposal site in this area is one of several topics which will be discussed at Friday's meeting of the Appomattox County Board of Supervisors.

Bill Britton, the county's special projects assistant and emergency services coordinator, will attend a meeting between officials of governments in the Central Virginia Planning District Commission, and representatives of the state Health Department and Solid Waste Commission on Friday morning.

Britton and William Hibbert of the CVPDC will report back to the Board of Supervisors during the board's afternoon meeting session.

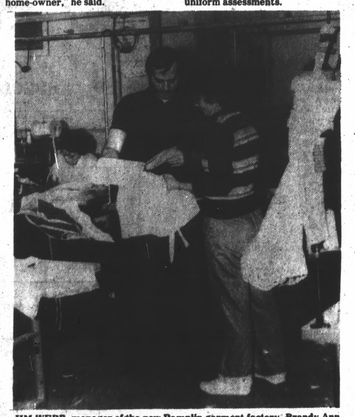
Hibbert says that the CVPDC is merely hosting the meeting. Officials of the various localities which could be affected by the state's radioactive disposal site plan will have a chance to talk with the state officials about the study.

Appomattox is one of several counties in this part of Virginia which has been identified as geologically suitable for location of a low-level radioactive waste disposal site.

One aspect of the disposal-site issue which will be discussed Friday is whether an ordinance the county has already passed prohibiting such a site will deter the state's consideration of Appomattox as a location for the dump.

Franklin Vaughan, chairman of the Appomattox Board of Supervisors, notes that the ordinance was passed last year "in anticipation of this sort of thing which the state is considering now."

"I personally am against locating a nuclear disposal site in Appomattox," Vaughan says. "How much affect our ordinance will have on the state's decision remains to be seen," he added.



JIM WEBB, manager of the new Pamplin garment factory, Brandy Ann Manufacturing, discusses a garment sample with Betty Ramsey, a worker at the factory. The new industry is located in the old Pamplin Elementary School, and has just gone into production in the last two weeks. Webb says that he is still hiring, and that the workforce should be up to full initial capacity -- about 50 -- by the first of February. Webb notes that "since so many people have asked to see the factory, we will have an open house this Sunday (Jan. 16) from 2-5 p.m." The public is invited to visit the factory and see the latest addition to the growing community of Pamplin.

January birthdays: Robert Edward Lee was born January 19, 1807, at Stratford House, Westmoreland County, Virginia. Thomas Jonathan (Stonewall) Jackson was born January 21, 1824, Clarksburg, Virginia. Many other January birthdays including Franklin D. Roosevelt, January 31. Plus Henry Lee and Richard Henry Lee.

It was Henry Lee (Lighthouse Harry) who described George Washington as "First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

* * *

At the moment we might change that to read: "Washington, first in war, first in peace and first in the National Football League." The pro football season is winding down, and Washington Redskin fans are legend.

Thanks to my friend, Woodrow Williams, of Pamplin, for calling my attention to an error in my listing last week of the players on the great 1957 N. Y. Yankee baseball team. Ben Bengough, not Collins, was catcher. Woodrow Williams played with the Cincinnati Reds for three years, beginning in 1941, and then a year with the Brooklyn Dodgers. "Woody" ranks as one of the all-time top area athletes and is now a successful Pamplin merchant. Before pro baseball he played here at Appomattox and with the Lynchburg Craddock-Terry team.

Saw our friend, Miss Cassie Baldwin, in Appomattox recently. She is the competent writer of Rocks news for this paper and is the senior Times-Virginian correspondent.

On mentioning that there was a mouse in my basement, I was offered the loan of a cat and another friend begged to give me a cat. Thanks, but I bought a new mouse trap. Final rites were held for the deceased early Monday morning.

Something to think about (as if you needed an urge) ... the human population of Mother Earth in 1900 was approximately 1.6 billion. Currently it is estimated at 4.5 billion and may reach 6 billion by the year 2,000. That calls for an awesome lot of food, housing, jobs, etc. Seems to me there are more housing ads than usual in the papers. For Sale, For Rent.

Not For Me Department. Several pro football teams feature barefoot kickers.

From a church bulletin: Appomattox Ministers Association Tuesday night of this week. Quote from another bulletin, "nothing makes you feel better off than your first ride on a horse." And a twist on an old saying: You are as young as you feel, but not as important.

Thanks for reading and look for winter weather anytime now.
